Step 1: Wrap the right side of the short cord through the middle and around the cords on the right.

Step 2: Wrap the working end of the right long cord under the three cords on the left, then over and down through the space it created. Pull tight.

With the long piece of cord, make a four strand double cow's hitch. See our other tutorial for instructions.

Loosen the knots on the working end and insert the shorter cord with the middle at the buckle. Tighten the knots again.

Step 3: Wrap the short cord on the left down through the middle and around the cords on the left.

Step 4: Wrap the long cord on the left under the three cords on the right, then over and down through the space it created. Pull tight.

Continue repeating steps 1 through 4 pulling all cords tight and pushing the cords tight toward the top. Near the end a lacing needle comes in handy.

Once you reach the end with a nice tight weave, you can simply trim and melt the excess cords. If you want a little more security, lace the cords back through the bracelet before trimming.
